ABSTRACT:

This paper studied the importance of the employer-employee branding in the IT sector. In today's scenario when every big conglomerates have expansion plans the biggest challenge they are facing is of talent acquisition getting right talent in this talent crunch market is giving nightmares to the organizations. In such a state just offering a competitive package will not be sufficient to attract the best talent.

It is found that, 86% of HR experts believe that recruitment is becoming more like marketing, and employer branding is now important more than ever. Employees are reluctant or normally refuse to join a company with a bad reputation even if there is a pay hike. Employer branding is the secret to attracting the best talents from the industry. An offer was made to work for an organization with a reputation; around 92% of employees would consider switching employers. In short their employer branding is paying them returns by attracting the best talent from the industry. Employer branding gives high order benefits in terms of employee branding wherein employees of the organization spread positive word of mouth about the organization.

KEYWORDS: Employee brand, Employer brand, HOB (high order benefits), Recruitment

DATA COLLECTION:

This study is based on the primary data collected by HR people using informal interview from employees of Infosys, Wipro, Lester info services whereas secondary data is majorly based on recent articles and Interviews of corporate heads published in well-known newspapers like. The Economic Times, surveys by Glassdoor, Times ascent, etc.

Employee compensation is of one the major determinants of employee satisfaction in an organization. The compensation policy and the reward system of an organization are viewed by the employees as indicators of the management's attitude and concern for them. It is not just the compensation in total, but its fairness as perceived by the employees that determines the success of a compensation management system.

Hence, it is very important for the management to design and implement its compensation system with utmost care and tact. A good compensation system should be able to attract and retain employees, give them a fair deal, keep the organization competitive and motivate employees to perform their best.

INTRODUCTION:

It is irony to talk about talent crunch in the vastly populated country like India. There is a huge gap in the skills required versus skills available in the market. So, whatever talent available in the market is in great demand. In such a situation, employers are attempting to attract talent in various ways and encourage employees to become involved with the company so as to achieve its objectives when it comes to recruiting and retaining staff today, employer branding is of great importance. As more companies adjust for hybrid mode of working where work from home is new normal especially in IT sector and due to swift technology adoption, the IT sector talent shop has become extremely competitive.

Employer branding is the collection of the activities a company carries out to position itself as one of the best employer it includes employee value proposition, employee experience, and communication to prospective hires.
